Summary

I'm an Accounting student at Obafemi Awolowo University with a strong passion for tech, especially where it meets finance. I build full-stack applications using Next.js, Node.js, Express, and MongoDB, and I've completed over 600 hours of hands-on development through freeCodeCamp, earning certifications in backend and responsive web design.

From secure auth systems to dynamic UIs, I enjoy creating tools that are clean, scalable, and user-focused. I'm particularly interested in solving financial problems with code, whether through fintech research or real-world app development.

Currently, I'm open to opportunities in backend development, fintech, or any role where I can apply both my coding and financial skills.
